

THE UNIVERSITY HONORS COLLEGE
PRESENTS

Taste:
The Aesthetics of Food and Music
A Lecture-Demonstration

Professor Peter Machamer
History and Philosophy of Science
3:15 PM
Friday, November 6, 2009
3500 Cathedral of Learning

Some people some times talk about having good taste--in art, books to read, friends, music, or whatever. But taste in this sense seems to be a metaphorical extension from taste in the bodily sense. So we need to explore bodily taste, particularly in and of food, in order to be in a position to explore other senses and other arts, especially music. Music seems the art most tied to the body. So this interactive lecture will discuss taste in and of foods, and everyone will taste some (unusual) foods, and discuss taste in music, and we'll listen to some tunes. It's all about harmonies and counterpoints.

The interactive demonstrations are not for the squeamish, the fainthearted, the unadventurous, or the non-carnivorous (unless they don't want to eat!)

ALL ARE WELCOME!