Directions for the Fulbright Form 10: Campus Committee Evaluation

When you submit your final application, our office submits Fulbright’s Form 10 (below) along with it. The form asks six questions that directly address the strength of your proposal and your candidacy for the Fulbright. It is reviewed by Fulbright’s national screening committee in their evaluation of your application.

You will fill out this form and submit a copy of it to the national scholarships office by September 1st; you should start looking at this form on July 1 (or earlier). By answering these questions, you are forced to consider and succinctly address questions about your candidacy that will strengthen your application, such as “How is your project valid?” and “What do you know about the country to which you’re applying?” You also will be able to consider whether you have communicated this information about yourself in your project statement. Additionally, it gives you a chance to express what you think is important about yourself and your skill set that might not have found a place within your application.

Finally, being familiar with this form is a great preparation strategy for your campus interview. Many of the interview questions will be based upon the framework established by this sheet. If you are able to confidently and completely answer these questions, you should be set for your interview.
